On Tuesday, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upheld the district court decision that denied T-Mobile's request for preliminary approval to buy Sprint. T-Mobile had argued that the Federal Communications Commission improperly created new standards for the company's sale of an enlarged stake in its German parent T-Mobile AG TMAGn.DE, as it did with Sprint. But the three-judge panel said the FCC acted properly, and that the $26 billion deal did their quality. The challenge we are facing today is "quality" For any product or service to be successful and lucrative, it should deliver the expected quality which is the core of our actions. When we make a promise, we need to deliver what we promised. But if we don't deliver the quality, we cannot get the reputation we deserve. So, why don't we ask the suppliers, partners and customers to evaluate the quality and integrity of what we provide them? Why not ask them "Are you satisfied or not?" and "How do you think you will feel in the future if you don't get what you paid for and worked for?" We need to start cleaning out the "dirty" books and redefine our standards to deliver the right
